FIVE POUNDS BRITISH.

CHAPTER I.

The scene of our story, reader, is laid in Ireland. If you give ear for a moment to two old women who are gossipping by a country roadside, we shall hear of some of our characters.

"And so ye tell me they're all well about your parts, Judy?"

"Yis, they're all purty well, Mrs. McGrath—but did ye hear what happened Thady Dolan?"

"No, Judy; what's wrong wid the boy now?"

"Oh, there's a great matther wrong wid him! Sure his own brother, Ned, that wint to Amerika three years ago, has sint him a lether full of gold!"

"Now, Judy, d'ye tell me that?"

"Faix, I do, Mrs. McGrath; and Father Lavery's been down at Thady's cabin, hard at work this half hour, tryin' to read the lether for thim, but I belave it's too scholastic for him, wid all his larnin', so he's sint off for the schoolmasther, to let him try what he can make out of it."

Leaving the women to their talk, we will follow Maguire, the schoolmaster, pass him on the way, and enter Thady Dolan's cabin before him. The good Father Lavery, with his hat on his knees and his staff leaning against the wall where he is sitting, is trying to decipher Ned Dolan's epistle, muttering his vexation at times as certain phrases and odd words completely baffle him. Thady is on his feet in the middle of the room, holding in his hand a draft for five pounds, which Ned has sent him. There is joy within the lad, and it manifests itself by his grinning face, his humorous remarks aimed at the occasion, and his affectionate way of troubling his wife, who, with her apron instead of a bellows, is trying to coax a turf fire into a better display of itself. The schoolmaster enters, and the priest greets him with:

"Welcome, Maguire, thou man of A, B and C! Thrice welcome under these circumstances! Your eyes are younger than mine, and more used to dealing with scrawls; so there is a matter for their consideration.—Try them with it, and let us have as free a translation as you can give us."

"A literal translation would be out of the question, I'm afraid," responded Maguire, after he had scanned the letter a while.—"Such an arrangement of written words I never before witnessed; but here goes for as passable English as I can render them into."

And, with a humorous twinkle in his eye, he reads the letter, which we give below, in spelling and expression as near to the original as possible:

"NEW YORK November 2, 18—.

"MI DEER THAD—I take my pen in hand to rite too let you kno that i am well hoping those few lines will find you in gud helth as they leeve me at present. I send those few lines mesilf the other letters i wrote wur by another man. deer Thad i send you five pounds british, am another five pounds and you an Molly come out to this dacint countri, hire a dacint ship. see now i kan read and write the young misthress larned me upon mi word Thad i think shed marry me if it wusnt for the quare squint i have in mi left eye—that a joke but never mind. Now cum out heer as sune as you kan. try hard to arn the rest of the muny if ye only knew that i have to go with no top coat this cowld Winter coming so as to send ye this muny you wud try yer best to make up the differance kis Molly for me an take a twin brothers luv to yerself. tell Father lavery I honor his mimry an also give me luv to Missus McGinnis that kapes the pigs. Tell owld Maguire that i ramember all the batins iver he gave me, and that i wont forgit him if iver he cumes out heer. Give mi luv to little mary casey, an tell her that if i hadnt left Ireland and if she hadnt red hair we mite hev married long ago.

"So no more at presant from your
"NED DOLAN.

"P. S. Thad cudnt ye arn the other five pounds by borryin it?"

"That last suggestion is very much to the point," remarks Father Lavery, laughing; "but the reference to yourself, Maguire, is rather ambiguous, eh?"

"True enough, your reverence. Yes, the whole letter is like Ned himself. He was a careless dog, but as good a soul as ever lived."

"Troth, it's him that was the good soul," interposes Thady. "An' wasn't it dacint of him to sind the five pounds and go widout the top-coat for our sakes? Oh, if I only had another twin brother like him!"

"Which you could not very well have," responded the priest, laughing. "The path lies plainly before you, Thady. Ned has met with success in America; and seeing prosperity for you and your wife there, too, he sends money enough to pay the passage for one, trusting that you will double the amount by proper exertions. You must, therefore, use your utmost endeavors to increase what you have to the amount required; and after having done so, you can take your passage to a better land than this, where the poorest man can raise his head above water."

"Ah, it's meself would like to go there, Father; for I've nothin' to keep me here, barrin' that jewel of me heart, Mollie, and she'll go where I go. It's been bitter hard for me to keep the dog from my door the last two years, and I see nothing betther before me; but how could I make five pounds, or even half of it? The thrifle of rint that's upon us, and the few scanty bites we ate, is all I've made by me labor this many a day."

"Well, we must think of some plan for you, Thady; meanwhile let your own wits be busy; and there's Molly, sure she can contrive——"

"Ah, it's she that is the conthriver, your riverence. Sure she turned me coat twice for me, and if it only had the third side that would soon get an airin' too, I'll go bail."

"A wonderful sample of domestic economy, truly," replied Father Lavery, smiling at Thady's conceit.

"Ah, it's she that is the sample. Molly, you conthriver, couldn't we sell the pig?"

"Arrah, is it jokin' ye are, Thady. Sure we have no pig but the wan that was stole."

"And are you sure you have that, Molly?" asked the schoolmaster, laughing heartily at the expression.

"Oh, ye needn't laugh, Mister Maguire; maybe I'm not as simple as ye take me for."

"Prove it," says Maguire, laughing good humoredly.

"Prove it! I'll do that same, an' before I'm much oulder, ayther. Isn't what belongs to us our own until we sell or give it away?"

"Most certainly."

"And wasn't that pig our own, entirely?"

"It was, I'm sure."

"An' did we sell it or give it away?"

"I believe not."

"Then, Mister Maguire, I bowld that the pig that was stole is ours still!"

"Bravo! Molly, bravo!" exclaimed the priest. "There, Maguire, confess yourself beaten by an Irish syllogism, a bit of native logic, unobscured by the dust of the schools."

Maguire joins heartily in the laugh that is against him; and, after a few moments' further parleying, priest and pedagogue take their departure.

At the time our story opens Thady and Molly Dolan had been married half a year. Previous to her marriage she was a servant in one of the well-to-do families in the locality, and left her place, against the wishes of many, to associate her fortunes with Thady, giving little thought to the uncertain future before her. Indeed she hardly knew what discomfort was until the pinching poverty of her wedded days made itself felt. Still she never complained, for Thady was a kind husband, who had nothing to keep him from being clever except his empty pocket. The tidy habits that Molly had acquired when at service made themselves observable very soon after her appearance under Thady's roof.—There was not much in the cabin to make a show of neatness with, but whatever could be kept free from dirt, or whatever had a proper place for itself, did not miss attention; and the hand that did this had an effect on Thady, too, as his well-patched clothes and general improved appearance testified.

Thady had no occupation in particular—like too many Irish country lads—and, therefore, eked out but a precarious livelihood.—He gave the small farmer who was over him work enough to pay the rent of his dwelling, and half an acre of ground was hired on the same farmer's land when wanted, and he earned shillings here and there at ditching, plowing, harvesting, threshing, etc. His one failing—the bane of his country—was a love of whisky, which too often mastered him, and which was a cause of secret fretting to Molly. She—and she had a considerable tact of her own—had extorted a promise from him, about two weeks before the time at which we introduce him to the reader, that he would not touch liquor any more. She trembled for him, however, when he became master of the five pounds.

Our couple sat up very late that night after the departure of the two parish worthies. They debated the question of how the money should be doubled very earnestly. Thady, who was the doubting one at first, became the more sanguine party. He put forth several schemes, which were quickly cried down by Molly; and she, the quicker witted one of the two, had nothing to suggest. Alas! she was afraid that her husband could not be master of himself and so much money at the same time.

"Now, Molly, you crathur, how would it do to buy pigs for the money—young pigs, I mane—kape them till they're a good size, and thin sill thim at a good profit?"

"An' how would you feed thim, Thady?"

"How would I feed thim?—why, like any other pigs, of coorse."

"Where would you get the money to keep thim in feed?"

"Eh! now that bothers me intirely; how did ye think of that, ye conthrivin' sample? The saints be about us, but it's well I have you to keep me from megandhorn and goin' ivery way but the one widout the crook in it."

Molly's objections to every plan of Thady's were received in good part by him. Indeed he was too happy in contemplation of his money to feel provoked at her. He pulled out his draft so often to have a fresh look at it, that she was forced to take it away from him and lock it in her chest, telling him in all likelihood he would forget himself and light his pipe with it in the morning. Then they retired for the night: no conclusion having been arrived at.

Father Lavery was an early visitor in the morning. He had a plan to propose on Thady's account—one that seemed very feasible to him. It was that Thady should go to Dublin, get a pedlar's license, purchase a stock of miscellaneous goods, and peddle them through the country. There was money in the business, and as an aid to Thady the priest would give him a letter of introduction to a friend in town, who would assist him in making his purchases. This scheme was more to Molly's mind than any of Thady's plans, which had too much speculation in them, and which involved attendance at fairs and markets—notorious for their bad associations. Thady took a strong liking to the priest's proposal, and announced himself as ready to put the matter into operation at once, confident that success would attend him. Molly was not so sanguine as her husband. She looked at his inexperience, and thought of his weakness, and it was only under a strong protest that she at last gave way to his pleadings and Father Lavery's persuasion.

"Trust him, Molly, trust him," said the priest, "and I'll go bail for him he won't come back empty handed. This is the only chance he has; he must earn the money required or he won't be doing right by Ned. And if he does not use some exertion to earn it now, ten to one but the five pounds he has will be squandered—and think what a sore heart Ned would have if he should hear such a story. Work for the money he must, Molly, for there is no one about these poor quarters who would make him a present of it."

It was accordingly agreed that Thady should turn roving merchant.

CHAPTER II.

One fine morning, a week after the events of our last chapter, Thady stood at his cabin door bidding good-bye to his Molly. As Dublin was not very far from his native place he was about to make the journey on foot; and he had concluded that after he had made his purchases he would return and begin his peddling among his neighbors. As this separation was to be only for a day or two, neither Thady nor Molly had great cause for a display of emotion. Nor did Thady exhibit any—he was as cheerful as he had ever been in his life—but Molly cried a little at first, and although her husband dried her tears and strove to raise her spirits, a cloud remained on her face.

"Ye needn't be frettin' for me, my darlin'. Sure I'll be back to ye again immajetly; an' if it's the thought of the whisky that's botherin' ye, make yer mind aisy on that; for not a drop will I taste while I'm away, by these five fingers I'm holdin' up to ye!"

For the sake of good luck Molly threw her shoe after him as he left the door. He hurried off, with a stout staff for company, as fully resolved in his own mind to earn money and let whisky alone as any consistent man that ever made a resolution.

Who has not heard of the Curragh of Kildare?—that place so famous for its military reviews, and more famous still for the horse races that have taken place over its noble course. When Thady left the big road that led from his place, and began his tramp upon the highway, he was surprised to find the latter well covered by a great concourse of vehicles of every character. They were all going the same way, and that puzzled Thady until he remembered that the great fall meeting was to come off at the Curragh racecourse that day.

"Tare an' ages!" exclaimed our hero, "why did I make up my mind to go to Dublin to-day? I'll miss all the fun at the coorse, and that'll be a big miss for me, who has never been away from a race at Curragh for twenty years. Never mind, the coorse is on me way, an' I'll drop in to take a look at the horses anyhow."

Thady had his draft cashed by a shopkeeper of his town, who kept an account at Dublin: so he entered the race-course with five gold pieces in his pocket, each one worth twenty shillings. As it was early in the day, and as he was well acquainted with some of the horse-trainers, he had no trouble in getting admission to the stables where the animals that were to run were kept for the time. The sight of these beautiful thorough-breds only fired his blood, and when one of them was taken out by the groom, and put to a gallop to show his condition to his owner, Thady yielded to his heart's longings, put his visit to Dublin off for a day, and, what was more, determined to stake half his money at least on the grand race of the afternoon.

"An' why shouldn't I invest me money that way?" he said; "sure I'm only takin' a risk, an' wouldn't I be takin' a risk if I wint to Dublin? Troth, I might as well lose me money one way as another! Arrah, good morrow t'ye, cousin Barney!"

"Good morrow to yerself, Thady! Is it for Dublin ye are? or will ye stay for the races?"

"Troth, then, Barney, I think I may as well thry to arn an honest penny here as anywhere."

"Faix, you're right there, Thady; I wudn't make an ould baste of a pedlar of meself so long as I could double me money here in ten minutes, or less. Now, Thady, let me tell you how ye'll make a fortune on this very spot. There'll be five horses in the grand race to-day for the Kildare Cup. That bay mare ye saw go by a minute ago is Gipsy, and she's the favorite. Now, mind what I'm tellin' ye, Gipsy is bound to win! I had that from me own brother, and he's her trainer. So now ye know where to lay yer money. A wink is as good as a nod for ye any day."

"Faith, Barney, I don't care a chap for any trainer's story—not that I mane bad to your brother—but, at any rate, I've made up me mind how to put me money. I heard at the stables that Waterford would be here, and I just said to meself that whatever horse he backed at the grand race would be the one for me money."

"Well, do as ye like, Thady, and good luck to ye any how."

When the racing began Thady mingled with the small fry who gathered about the gates leading to the grand stand. The persons composing this gathering were small publicans, petty shop-keepers, farmer's sons, and others, who risked small bets, and considered the crown entrance fee to the stand as money thrown away. With these Thady felt perfectly at ease. He had been in such crowds on other rainy days, and had wagered odd half crowns and shillings on the running. Now he was to stake pounds where before he had ventured shillings.

The minor races were over, and now was to come the great struggle for the Kildare Cup. For this race five splendid horses were ready to try the turf. They were Faugh-a-ballagh, Barbarian, Shamrock, Blue Bonnet and Gipsy. The latter—a beautiful bay mare—was the favorite. She had done good running on several occasions, and had many backers. Barbarian belonged to a Mr. Bradshaw, and had many backers, and was from Maze, in the north of Ireland. He was not well known, but a rumor spread over the course that he had been put to a most severe test in the morning, and had done wonders. This was a point in his favor, and what gained him more friends was the fact that Denny Winn, the best jockey that ever rode on the Curragh, was to ride him. The three remaining horses were crack steeds, and each had a prestige.

The bell sounds, and the five horses come out for the usual short canter before starting in the race. Thady becomes very nervous now, and is raised to a full flutter of excitement when word comes to his party that the Marquis of Waterford has laid one hundred guineas on Barbarian. Thady's time had come, and his wager is:

"Two pounds on Barbarian against the field!"

"I'll take you," says a voice near him, and in a moment even money is placed in the hands of a stakeholder.

The horses are now in line for the start—the flag drops—they are off! Faugh-a-ballagh is away with the lead, Gipsy is close upon him, and Barbarian brings up the rear.

Thady wishes he had not made the wager.

The animals disappear now, as they round the turn, from the sight of our party at the gates; but those who are on the grand stand have the whole course in view, and with their glasses can distinguish the colors of the riders. From these reports come down every few seconds to the gate party. Thady's friend Barney hears and immediately reports that:

"Faugh-a-ballagh has fallen back, Gipsy has the whole field behind her, Shamrock is third and Barbarian is fourth."

Something thumps against Thady's waistcoat.

But a few seconds elapse when a second report says:

"Gipsy is still first—Barbarian has passed Shamrock and is fast drawing on his leader."

There is an easier feeling under Thady's waistcoat.

The excitement becomes intense now all over the course, and the eyes of Thady's party are anxiously looking for the first sight of the horses as they make the last turn and strike the homestretch.

"Here they are! here they are!" and wild shouts burst from a thousand throats as the jockeys' caps, bobbing up and down behind the rise of the hill, announce the approach. "Gipsy's first!" Yes, the gallant mare is still at the front; but Darby Winn has been doing well, for Barbarian has the second place, and is pushing hard for the mare.

Thady lays his remaining three pounds on the Barbarian.

On they come, thundering over the turf, and a great cheer goes up for Denny as he places the horse by the side of the mare, and the neck-and-neck struggle begins. Gipsy's rider is using whip and spur; Denny has his horse well in hand, and is riding with the best seat in the field. His spurs are quiet yet, and so is his whip, but he will put them to service presently. He has great confidence in his horse, and he knows that Gipsy is doing her utmost. Seventy, fifty, forty yards from the goal, and still together. Such whipping and sparring! Gipsy is stretching her beautiful neck as if she knew that an inch was as good as a mile; but the long strides of the horse have told their story—the bonny mare falls back, and Barbarian comes in the winner!

Success is a great elevator of the spirits. Thady's rose to an indescribable pitch when he found his great desire accomplished.—What Molly would think of the means he had used to accomplish his purpose never occurred to him; and when, with an arm around the neck of his friend Barney, he entered a public house and called for a round of punch, he forgot what he had said concerning whisky when he held up the five fingers of his right hand to Mollie in the morning. And one round was not enough; another, and another, and another followed—and then the two friends reached that mellow state which so well bears out the saying, "There's truth in wine." Steadfast friends they have been for years, but now they must protest their friendship for each other over and over again. They shake hands twenty times at least, and laugh and cry by turns, as their feelings move them. Barney takes a new silk handkerchief from his neck and ties it around Thady's as well as his uncertain hands can; and Thady, in an unaccountable excess of kindness, lends Barney five pounds towards the purchase of a cow. Barney essays again to shake hands, but misses the hand of Thady and falls to the floor.—Thady stoops to assist him to his seat, loses his balance, falls over the body of his prostrate friend, and is soon in a drunken slumber.

The sleep of drunkenness is heavy. The placing of Thady and Barney in the cart of a farmer who was going by the way of their homes did not awaken either of them. One individual who helped to put Thady in the cart, was very particular in arranging our hero's waistcoat and buttoning his coat.

CHAPTER III.

The glare of the sun of noon was in Thady's cabin when he awoke the next day. It took him a moment to collect his senses, in which task he was aided by a peculiar thirst in his mouth and a racking pain in his head. What also served to suggest the event of the day previous was the fact that his clothes were on him. He soon realized that he had been on a drunken spree, and a sense of shame crept over him—a sense of guiltiness; and burying his head in the bed clothes, he began to indulge in regrets and accusations. What noise was that that sent a pang to his heart, and made him tremble like a coward? It was only a small matter—it was only the sad moan of a woman. There was a sound of half-stifled sobbing, too, and Thady knew whose heart was almost breaking. He raised himself upon his elbow, and looking across the room he saw Molly, with her head beat upon her knees, and her body swinging to and fro, as she gave vent to the grief that was upon her. Thady had seen her in such situations before—sprecing was no new thing to him—but never before had he felt so much self-reproached. There was one thought, however, that consoled him—had he not doubled his five pounds at the races? and was he not master of the amount required to bring him to Ned and good fortune in America? This was the silver and golden lining to his cloud.

Rising from the bed, he half-walked, half-staggered to where Molly was sitting, and placing an arm about her, he drew her close to him, and tried the blarney he knew so well how to use.

"Ah, me darlin', me jewel, what are ye goin' on this way at? What has wint wrong wid ye,' my crathur? Shure ye are brakin' me heart wid yer sighin' an' groanin.' What's wrong wid ye at all, at all?"

"What's wrong wid me, is it, Thady?" said she, turning her tearful face toward him. "Ah, it's you that may well ask that—it's you that may well ask that. Oh, why did I live to see this day, why didn't I die before this disgrace came upon me and mine?"

And the poor woman broke into sobbing again, in a way that appealed very strongly to Thady's feelings.

"Arrah, Molly, acushla, don't fret yerself like this. Shure I knew I was drunk and I'm sorry for it; but I've good news for you, me darlin'. Look up, Molly! Look up, woman! Shure the five pounds are doubled, and we can start for Ned to-morrow, if we like. Won't that dry yer eyes, me beauty?"

"Ye have doubled the five pounds, have ye, Thady? Well, an' if ye have where's the money?"

"Where's the money, is it? Why, it's in me pockets, of coorse—where else wud it be? Eh! it's not in me vest pockets; it must be in me—in me—eh! why, it's not in me trowser pockets, ayther! Ha! ha! what frightens me? Eh! ah, it's in me coat, of coorse; let me go to the bed there till I get it."

"Sit where you are, Thady; your money's not there at all—you haven't got it at all. It was stole!"

"Stole, Molly? Stole? Oh, no! no! no! Shure yer jokin', eh? Ha! ha! ha! why yer frightened me, woman!"

"And so well may you be frightened, Thady, for not one penny was on ye when ye came intil this house last night, barrin' four half crowns and a shilling. I sarched through all yer pockets."

"Ye sarched me pockets and found me goold pieces gone! Oh, Molly, an' shure ye are jokin'? Say ye are jokin'—say ye are jokin'!"

And the half-crazy man began a frantic search through his clothing.

"Ah, ye needn't look, Thady; yer money's gone where ye'll never see it more.—Oh, Thady! Thady! it made me heart sore when them that saw ye at the races came and towld me; and when ye were brought home to me drunk I thought me poor heart would break. I knew yer money was gone—I knew it before I sarched ye. Ye were where ye should not have been, Thady; ye wanted to make yer money too fast, and ye forgot the honest errand ye started upon.—And what will Ned say?—Ned, the good brother, that will have to go widout——"

"There, Molly! Ah, don't! don't!"

This last thrust went home to Thady's heart, and as the keen sense of the ingratitude he had shown for his brother's kindness came over him, he threw himself upon his bed, and burying his face, gave way to the tears that emotion was forcing upon him. It was while affairs were in this state that a person was heard approaching the cabin whistling a tune. The door opened and Thady's friend, Barney, entered, talking to himself:

"It's a fine boy I am intirely—drunk as a lord all night and sober as a judge in the mornin'. Eh! what's this at all? It can't be a funeral, for there's no coffin; there's tears enough for a wake, any way. What's wrong, Thady boy?"

"Arrah, Barney, is that you?"

"Of coorse it's me—who else?"

"This is a sore day for me, Barney. I've hardly a penny to me name, an' yesterday I left her wid five pounds in me pocket—five pounds that I doubled at the races, as you know. It was all took from me—stole whin I was drunk. Ah, Barney, why did we go to the public house at all?"

"Bekase we wanted our punch—why else Now, Thady Dolan, if ye think yer whole ten pounds was stole from ye, ye are much mistaken. Don't ye remember lendin' me five pounds toward buying a cow?"

"Lendin' you five pounds, Barney? N—I—I—eh? yes, I do!—I do! Oh, have ye got it, Barney? Have ye—"

"Be aisy, boy; don't be rowlin' yer eye like an uneducated maniac. Of coorse I have it; what else would bring me here to this grave yard? Yes, Thady, I have it.—And you know that if I had been sober wouldn't have axed ye to lend me it; but I was drunk enough to do ye a good turn, To the thief that picked your pocket forgot to pick mine—good luck to his bad mimory There they are, Thady—five good yellow boys that could look the sun in the face widout blinkin'. There, man, don't squeeze me hand so hard! Don't be thankin' me at all, Molly; I've only been doin' me duty—what else? Well, good day to ye both; I'm an honest man, if me name is Barney." And the rollicking youth departed, whistling "Garryowen."

When Thady invested his five pounds again it was in legitimate trade. He followed out his original purpose, and purchased pedlars' wares; and when he was ready to start on his tramp Molly had secured a place for herself, and was earning an odd shilling or two to lay by. Thaddy found it slow work making money at pedling; but by avoiding whisky, and by keeping hard at what he had in hands, he managed to save a sum which, with Molly's earnings, paid the passages of the two to America. And when fortune had done a little for Thady in the new world, Barney was not forgotten. That worthy received a draft for five pounds and a letter beseeching him to take passage for America; and when he had the letter explained to him his first exclamation was: "Of coorse I'll go to Amerky—where else?"

EXTRAORDINARY FECUNDITY.—The fact was recorded not long since that a German in this State was the father of forty children by two wives. His case is remarkable, but not unprecedented. In 1782 the name of Pheador Vacilitz was registered at Moscow. He was then seventy-five years old, and had been twice married. By his first wife he had forty-nine children. She brought forth four children at a time four births; three at a time seven births, and twins on six occasions. His second wife gave birth to eighteen children in eight deliveries—to twins in six and to three children in two deliveries; so that that peasant became the father of sixty-seven children, of whom sixty-three were living in 1782. In the reign of Empress Elizabeth, somewhat earlier in the last century than the instance above related, a peasant was brought to St. Petersburg and presented to Her Majesty. He was accompanied by eighty-two of his lawful children, and successfully applied for a pension.

MONEY.—Men work for it, beg for it, steal for it, starve for it and die for it; and all the while, from the cradle to the grave, nature and God are thundering in our ears the solemn question: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" The madness for money is the strongest and lowest of passions. It is the insatiate Moloch of the human heart, before whose remorseless altar all the finer attributes of humanity are sacrificed. It makes merchandise of all that is sacred in the human affections, and often traffics in the awful solemnities of the eternal.

A BROOKLYN PRESBYTERIAN, who has great faith in the catechism and teaches it with a pertinacity that would challenge the admiration of Luther or Calvin, was putting a youngster of four years through a course the other day, when the question came up, "Who tempted Eve?" The little fellow after a few moments' thought, with an air of confidence exclaimed: "It's the fellow who lives in hell; I've forgot his name."

WASHINGTON'S DEATH.—It is a fact, not generally known perhaps, that Washington drew his last breath in the last hour in the last day of the last week in the last month of the year, and in the last year of the century. He died Saturday night, 12 o'clock Dec. 31, 1799.

CAMBRIA FREEMAN.

EBENSBURG, PA.,
THURSDAY, . . . JAN. 9, 1868.

THE SKIES ARE BRIGHT.

The year of grace, 1868, opens full of hope for the patriot.

The period of internecine warfare is not the best for that wholesome discussion and comparison of views which are the very life-blood of a Republic. Especially was all discussion discarded during the recent rebellion, but an attempt to discuss questions of national importance not only endangered the safety of the offending press and types, but the personal safety of the writer who would be hardy enough to assail any of the measures of the "Government."

Democratic history would have taught the minions of power that the integrity of the Constitution and Laws could be preserved, no matter how severe or tedious the struggle of arms. The war of 1812 lasted nearly as long as the late rebellion, and was waged against the most powerful nation on earth. Our country was invaded in the North and in the South—our Capitol was burned to the ground—and this was at a time when our country was comparatively in its infancy. During this time New England did theoretically what the South has since done practically. She refused her supplies of men and money—held meetings to nullify the acts of Congress, culminating in the Hartford Convention—and, indeed, her citizens actually gave "aid and comfort" to our British enemies by burning blue lights on the coast to warn them of impending dangers. Yet during all this struggle there was no demolition of printing presses, no military arrests, no incarcerations in the fortresses of the United States for either speaking or writing against the measures of the administration. No Constitutional right was denied to any citizen because of his opinions during the whole course of the war. If there was a single exception to this rule it was one which more than proves the rule itself. Gen. Jackson, for the safety of the city, found it necessary to declare martial law at New Orleans, and even to arrest the Judge who upheld the civil as superior to the military power. But no sooner does he return from the achievement of the greatest victory of the war than he acknowledges the supremacy of the civil power by submitting to the sentence of the same Judge he had imprisoned, and voluntarily paying the fine of $1,000 which had been imposed on him.

In the war of the rebellion, however, a different state of things prevailed, and the father was in many cases hurled into prison while the sons were in the field doing battle for the Union. And the intolerance of those acts did not end with the war, but, fostered by the pride of power, continued to prevail, and in 1865 and 1866 was apparently maintained by a majority of the People.

But, thanks to the continued and increasing madness of Radicalism, and to the "sober second thought" of the People, the reign of fanaticism has passed away, and right reason has resumed her throne. The heresy of refusing to reap the fruits of the war in a Union of the States, and the determination to govern the white people of the South by the suffrages of the untutored negroes and the bayonets of a Northern army, has, in time, had its full effect upon the public mind. Hence it is that a reaction without a parallel in the history of the United States has overtaken the Radicals in the elections of 1867. Hence it is that almost every Northern and Western State is revolutionized. Hence it is that the great controlling Middle States of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio have already cut loose from their Radical moorings, while the smaller States of New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Kentucky and Delaware follow in their wake. Hence even California, our mighty young sister of the Pacific, whose fortunes were supposed to be hopelessly wedded to Radicalism, has fallen into the Democratic column. And hence, too, it is that Radicalism, one year ago rampant and defiant, glorying in her strength, is now glad to retain her hold on one or two of the New England States, expecting to eke out a portion of her former strength from the suffrages of the negroes of the South.

We congratulate, then, not the Democratic party alone, but the conservative people of the North, on the auspicious opening of the year 1868. The people of the United States have plainly indicated their sentiments, and woe to those who disregard them. And those who are silly enough to imagine that mere personal popularity will atone to the people for rights withheld and wrongs unredressed—that mere military renown will enable Radicalism to procure negro supremacy—may rest assured, now and hereafter, that they "reckon without their host."

—The cry of "Hard Times" comes to us from all parts of the country. The newspapers of every State are reiterating the cry. There is untold misery and distress among the poor of our large cities

THE BURNING OF A NEGRO IN GEORGIA.—We copy from the Augusta Chronicle and Sentinel the following account of the affair at Louisvilee, Jefferson county, Georgia:

A gentleman from Jefferson informs us of a fearful outrage which was perpetrated near Louisville, Jefferson county, on Saturday, December 21. It appears that a young lady, aged sixteen, was walking alone on the public road, one mile from Louisville, on Saturday, December 21, about midday, when she was accosted and insulted by a negro. Terrified at finding herself in so helpless a situation she attempted to run, but the brute quickly seized her and felled the poor girl to the ground and most shockingly outraged her person. The negro left his victim on the road side, where she was found by some citizens.

When the outrage was made known the people, white and black, scoured the country in search of the negro, but it was not until Monday that he was arrested. Some fifty negroes and a number of whites assembled together, and so incensed were they at the fearful act which the prisoner had committed, that they tied him to a stake and burned him alive. The negro confessed that he committed the deed, and related the revolting circumstances to the crowd. If the crime was fearful so was his punishment. It would have been better to let the law take its course than to resort to this summary method of punishment. Our enemies use it as a pretext to oppress our people. The fact of the freed people themselves being mainly instrumental in the burning of the negro will be distorted and does not justify this awful retribution. Our people, in all cases, should let the law take its course.

WONDERFUL HEROISM.—An instance of great heroism on the part of a young man, Captain Wm. Jackman, is related in the Newfoundland papers as having occurred at Labrador during the violent hurricane of October 9th last. A vessel called the Sea Clipper had struck on a reef near a place called Spotted Islands, Labrador, at which there were no residents. This young man, Captain Jackman, being providentially in the neighborhood, witnessed the vessel's striking, saw her fall to pieces with a number of persons on her deck and rigging—twenty-seven, as it afterward appeared. To save some of these poor creatures, Mr. Jackman cast himself into the sea and swam to the wreck, a hundred fathoms or more from the shore. The hurricane at this time was at its height, accompanied by snow. Eleven times did this heroic man swim between ship and shore, each time bringing a man from the wreck and placing him in safety. By this time persons from a neighboring settlement had arrived with ropes. Sixteen trips more did the noble sailor make, conducting all the survivors in safety to the shore. Captain Jackman, like all true heroes, is said to be as modest as he is brave, and when spoken to on the subject will not allow that he did anything more than his duty. Application is to be made on his behalf, by the magistrate of the district in the Royal Humane Society for its gold medal, which will undoubtedly be promptly granted.

LABOR DISTRESS.—From every part of the country North come cries of hard times, want of employment, reduction of wages, high prices of the necessaries of life, manufacturing stagnation and impending starvation to thousands of working people. On Saturday last seven hundred men were discharged from the Central Park, New York, to swell the ranks of the fifty thousand unemployed workpeople who are vainly begging through the streets of that city for work. In Brooklyn another discharge of workmen took place from the Government navy yards last week, and there are now fifteen thousand men out of employment in that city. Throughout New England there is a general stagnation of manufactures and reduction of wages. On the first instant the wages of the workmen employed in the railroad shops at Scranton—one thousand in number—were reduced ten per cent. The Dixon Iron Works company, at the same place, which employs seven hundred men, have given notice of a similar reduction, and they intend to discharge all the single men. The Lackawana Iron Company, at the same place, have also discharged a number of workmen and will make a further reduction of working force. At Pittsburg, and elsewhere in this State, reductions of wages and discharges of large numbers of workmen have lately taken place. In the Western and Northwestern States the intelligence is of similar import—general stagnation and labor distress.

A MAN SCALPED BY ACCIDENT.—The Milwaukee Wisconsin of the 26th of December thus describes an extraordinary accident:

Yesterday a singular accident took place at Rodis' packing house. There being strong prospects of a thaw, the men were at work rapidly cutting up hogs. Jacob Blum was at one of the benches, and while moving a hog forward his foot slipped, and his head came directly under the twelve pound cleaver, which struck him, taking off the scalp neater and cleaner than a Sioux could do it. The skull was not injured in the least. Blum fell, but soon got up, shook the man who had struck the blow by the hand, and said that himself was alone to blame for the accident. He went home and was attended to, but there is no danger of the accident proving a fatal one. When he saw the result of the blow, the man who held the cleaver dropped it, the fear that he had killed his companion taking away all of his strength.

—Senator Sumner and his wife, it is stated by the Home Journal, have finally agreed on a permanent separation. The ground alleged is "the certainty—discovered only too late—that there exists between the parties an incompatibility of temperament and opinion on certain social questions, which precludes the possibility of their living happily together as man and wife."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—Reliable intelligence from Africa states that Dr. Livingstone, the explorer, is safe and well.

—A drunken vagrant in Baltimore was once one of the wealthiest and most beautiful heiresses of the city.

—Ex-President Buchanan is said to be very feeble at his home near Lancaster, Pa., and is not expected to live over the winter.

—In the rural districts of Maine, the ladies wear a large pumpkin seed, trimmed with fur for a bonnet, the large end in front to keep the wind off.

—John Bishop shot his wife and himself, at St. Albans, Vt., about noon on Saturday. Bishop is dead and but little hopes are entertained of his wife's recovry. Cause jealousy.

—A British transport went ashore at Castine, Maine, in 1799, and a bunch of shingles was taken from the wreck recently, and found to be as sound as when shipped from England.

—They have an exhibition of the "Last Agonies of Abraham Lincoln," at an anatomical gallery in Boston. The next thing will probably be the agonies of Mrs. Lincoln while attempting to sell her wardrobe.

—Rev. Albert S. Hunt, an unmarried Methodist minister at Brooklyn, N. Y., received for a Christmas present from his parishoners and India rubber model of a young lady, stuffed with $500 in greenbacks.

—An army contractor, it is reported, has been sentenced to five years' imprisonment for attempting to cheat the English Goverment. A cotemporary wonders whether such a sentence was ever imposed in this country.

—On the 31st, whilst the steamer Henry Ames was discharging cargo at New Orleans, the guards gave way, precipitating part of its cargo into the river and crushing and drowning twenty men—whites and negroes.

—A few nights ago St. Vincent's Cathedral Church, in Baltimore, Md., was visited by thieves, who blew open an iron safe, containing the silver vessels of the church; the explosion frightened them away, minus the silver.

—A fight with the Indians occurred on November 28th near the South Fork, Oregon, in which nineteen soldiers of Gen. Crook's command were killed, one of whom was Lieut. John Madigan, of Jersey City, and another Carl Bross, of Newark.

—A large bundle, which was tumbled about on the ground in the hurry of extricating the sufferers at Angola, at last emitted a wail, and on being opened was found to contain a six months' old baby without a scratch upon its body. The mother was dead.

—A curious accident happened the other day to a butcher in Cleveland, Ohio. He was getting ready to kill a sheep and holding the knife in his mouth. The sheep gave a vigorous kick and knocked the knife upwards, edge foremost, slicing off the end of the man's nose.

—It is reported that a resolution will be introduced in the House this week calling upon the Executive Department of the goverment to demand the release of Father McMahon, a naturalized citizen of the United States, now imprisoned in Canada upon the charge of participation in the Fenian raid.

—The last development of the Weston fever at the west is the wager of a soldier under McClellan to walk seventy-five miles in twenty-four hours, carrying a musket, knapsack and other accoutrements. The feat to be performed at the Dexter park, Chicago, and the wager to be one thousand dollars.

—It is stated that A. T. Stewart of New York, has received a long letter from General Grant, in reference to his nomination for the Presidency by the late mass meeting at Cooper Institute, New York, and that the General accepts the resolutions and authorizes the committee to use his name for the Presidency.

—A lady in Great Barrington, Mass., recently gave birth to a female child, on the back of whose head was a protuberance, in perfect representation of the prevailing "waterfall." Even the marks of the ribbon with which they are usually tied on, were planly shown on the child's neck. It was alive when born, but died soon afterwards.

—General Gillem, of the Freedmen's Bureau, has written a report describing the awful condition of the negroes in the South, who are driven almost to desperation from want. Why do not the Radical papers publish it? Are they afraid to lay this terrible testimony of the bad legislation of their party before their readers? It looks like it.

—Judge Richard Busteed, of the United States Court of Alabama, was shot in Mobile last week by District Attorney L. V. B. Mertin, receiving two severe wounds, neither of which is yet known to be mortal. Martin was under indictment in Busteed's court for alleged revenue frauds and extortion, and the difficulty grew out of this fact. Busteed formerly resided in New York city. Martin was arrested.

—Two very pretty white girls seen in the cars at Greensboro, N. C., by the New York Herald's correspondent, were the daughters of an English gold miner in Guilford county, N. C., and had voluntarily left their homes as the wives of two coal black negroes. They were destined to Vincennes, Ind., and Xenia, Ohio. Much indignation was manifested by the white passengers, and threats of lynching the negroes were indulged in, but not carried out.

—Another terrible catastrophe has occurred at sea. The steamship Raleigh, from New York for New Orleans, took fire when near Charleston, and was totally destroyed. The Raleigh had fifty-five souls on board, of which number some twenty were passengers. About thirty of the crew and passengers were saved in the ship's boats, and it is feared all the others are lost. The fire spread so rapidly that it was almost impossible to get out the boats before the whole vessel was in flames.

—An estimate compiled from statistics collected by the governors of southern States places the number of whites and blacks in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas, who are in a starving condition, at three millions.

—Mr. Jacob Barker, one of the oldest merchants in New Orleans, and at one times a millionaire, has gone into bankruptcy. He is trying to push through the courts in order to get another start, and will probably be on his feet again before long.

—The Boston Commercial Bulletin says, "Not only our manufacteries are closed, or running on short time, but our mechanics and laboring men by thousands are thrown out of employment, and our commercial classes are suffering immense losses." That is perfectly right—the Lincoln war-chickens have gone home to New England to roost. The Yankees are just beginning to see what they have to pay far their free-negro whistle.

—A loyal letter writer who has been visiting Springfield, mentions the following incident in connection with the monumental tomb built for Abe Lincoln by his patrtotic townsmen; "The massive door of this unoccupied mausoleum left open, swine had made a lodgment within its sacred walls. We noticed with disgust that an obscene hog, of the female persuasion, had made her bed in its very interior, and given birth to a litter of pigs. This is scandalous!"

—We heard a few days ago (says the Schenectady Star) of a singular case. A gentleman who has been married for a number of years, has always desired to be the father of a daughter—his children being all boys. So great, indeed, has been his desire for a daughter, that he has often prayed that Providence might bless him with one. A kind Providence was not deaf to his prayers, for to his great surprise, he was granted three girls a few days ago, there being about three hours difference in their ages. He don't pray now so much as he did.

—The coroner's inquest upon the Angola railroad accident victims say that the accident was caused by a bent axle of the Cleveland and Toleda car No. 21, the car that was burned, causing the wheel on that track to drop into the swing rail, thus throwing the wheels of that truck, and subsequently the whole car off the track. Also, that there were forty person in all killed thereby. The jury also recommend the adoption and enforcement of a more thorough system of gauging the wheels of cars, so as to prevent an imperfect axle or wheel being made in future.

—The Dubuque Times tells an interesting story of the deceiving and disgrace of a young woman; of how her brother was a soldier in the army; of how he tried to get a furlough to go after his erring sister but was refused; of how he went to President Lincoln, got sympathy, a furlough, and a Captain's commission, of how he went and rescued her; of how she fell again; of how he rescued her again, and lastly, how the two have gone far away into a lone prairie to live beyond civilization, and, consequentiy, beyond temptation. The villain who wrought this mishap is said to be in Albany.

PROOFS OF THE SUPERIORITY OF THE AMERICAN WALTHAM WATCHES.—"This country has reason to be proud of this splendid specimen of American operative genius and enterprise. That it will work a revolution in the watch manufacturing of the world no one can doubt who examine the operations of the Waltham establishment, for it turns out watch movements at just about one-half the cost of imported movements—beside the uniform reliability of the machine made watches must give them a great advantage over all others wherever known. A poor time-piece of the machine make will be as rare in the future as a good one of hand make has been heretofore, for machinery is arbitrary in its performance, and can make a perfect article just as easy as one that is worthless. It will be a cause of congratulation if this highly useful American Enterprise shall have the effect of driving out of market the thousands of trashy foreign articles miscalled time-keepers, by furnishing so excellent and economical a substitute."—N. Y. Times.

"We have had one of the works of this Company in a case for some considerable time, and comparing them with former first-class works of different manufacture possessed by us, they have established in our opinion their superiority over any ever introduced for correctness as time pieces."—The World.

"We notice with regret (writing of the Paris Exposition) the absence of specimens of American manufacture, which although only comparatively of recent birth among us, is already producing results of the most satisfactory character. The watches manufactured by the Waltham Company are certainly, so far as strength, durability, and excellence as time-keepers are concerned, as good as anything produced by the French or Swiss manufactures."—N. Y. Herald.

"The beauty, the precisoin, the greater cheapness, the uniform excellence of a watch constructed by machinery so exquisite that the mere spectacle of its operation is poetic, gradually give the American Watches a public preference which will not be deceived."—Harper's Weekly.

"THE WEEKLY AGE" FOR THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

THE PRICE REDUCED!

The publishers of THE PHILADELPHIA AGE, desirous of extending the influence of their widely circulated journal, have determined to make such reduction in the price of their weekly issue as will place it within the reach of every man in the country. This reduction is made in view of the great importance of disseminating sound political doctrines in the present crisis of our governmental affairs. This journal will continue to be the fearless advocate of Democratic principles, and the earnest defender of the Union and the Constitution. It will uphold with all its power the Rights of The People, and will vigorously oppose the destructive and treasonable policy of Radicalism. It will seek to restore unity and good feeling throughout the nation, and thereby aid in securing the permanent Peace and Prosperity of the Republic. To meet the means of all classes, from and after January 1, 1868, THE WEEKLY AGE will be furnished at the following extraordinary rates:

One Hundred copies, 1 yr., one address, $100
Seventy five copies, 1 year, one address, $84
And one copy extra to the getter up of the club—additional copies at the same price.
Fifty copies, 1 year, one address, $62 50
And one copy extra to the getter up of the club—additional copies at the same price.
Forty copies, 1 year, one address, $52
Thirty copies, 1 year, one address, $42
And one copy extra to the getter up of the club—additional copies at the same price.
Twenty copies, 1 year, one address, $30
And one copy extra to the getter up of the club—additional copies at the same price.
Ten copies, 1 year, one address, $16.50
Five copies, 1 year, one address, $8.50

These prices, which are cash invariably in advance, apply only to yearly subscribers, and the papers must, in every case without exception, be sent to one address.

The Publishers also call attention to the following regular terms of their Daily and Weekly issue:

TERMS OF THE DAILY.—One copy, one year, $9 00; six months, $4.50; three months, $2 50; for any less period, at the rate of ONE DOLLAR per month. Payment required invariably in advance. Postage on the Daily, thirty cents per quarter, or one dollar and twenty cents per annum, to be prepaid at the office of delivery.

TERMS OF THE WEEKLY.—One copy, one year $2; five copies, one year, $9; ten copies, one year, $17.50; twenty copies, one year, $33. Payment required invariably in advance. Postage on the Weekly, five cents per quarter, or twenty cents per annum, to be prepaid at the office of delivery.

☞ The above terms will be rigidly adhered to. Drafts on Philadelphia, or Post-office Orders, payable to the order of the Publishers, being safer, are preferable to any other mode of remittance. All who send money by Express, must prepay Express charges. Specimen copies of the Daily and Weekly sent gratis, on application at this office. Advertisements inserted at moderate rates. Address
WELSH & ROBB,
430 Chestnut street, Philadelphia.

VALUABLE PROPERTY FOR SALE.—The undersigned offers for sale EIGHT ACRES OF LAND, adjoining the Borough of Chest Springs, Cambria county, having thereon erected a good Plank House, Frame Stable, and other outbuildings, with a never-failing spring of water and an excellent young orchard on the premises. The land is in a high state of cultivation, and the property altogether would be a most desirable home for any one wishing to buy it. For further information apply to LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.

FARE-VU, Desember 28, 1867.

Dere Fremane—Sein as how you hev got korespondents in most every plase of noat in the kounty but Fare-vu, which some vulgar peeple surname Whallupsburg, but whitch turm is not ginerally acsepted by the respectable part uv the komunity. I guess Fare-vu is not very ginerally known to the Fremane, and so it will be necessary for me to giv you a slite sketch of this very remarkable sitivation. Fare-vu is rather loosely lokated a distance from any where, and a stranger is struck very hard by the regerlarity of the street, whitch runs pretty ginerally all the wa thru it. It hes the largest poperlashin uv enny plase in the United Staits, akordin to the number of the inhabitants, biziness is now very dull, sinse the Rebelyun is dun and split brumes ar not so mutch made. It has grate facilitys fur trade in the grinestone line, as there ar a never failin suply of materiel close to hand. Thare ar no plaise to my knowin which has so mutch rume for impruvement as Fare-vu, ez thare iz a hepe of land all round it. It is the lokashin fur the sitivashun of the nu yuneyun churtch, as you will se by referin to the map of the kounty. But it iz not necesary fur me to go inter enny lenthy akount uv the plaise, fur if the Freemane ever kums this wa, and iz a little observin, if it is a clere day, he will see the plaise hisself. But uv this enuff.

I will now, dere Fremane, kall yure attenshun to a most stupendus affare whitch kum off down to the metin hous, (not the yuneyun metin hous in Fare-vu, but the nu one as ain't yuneyun, down a pece). Thare waz a very nise professer kum inter these parts sum time sinse fur the purpes of raisen fifty dolers and a selek singin skule. Thare waz no panes spared to make it a-moosin and entertainen. Nun but the very flour and kreme of the naborhood were alowed to put in thare appearence, and the riff-raff and fog-ends were ginerally notified that there war no show fur them. So the singin went on, and like all good things yearthly, (as Deakin Peabody says.) had to kum for to have an end. But it was konkluded to hev a grand konsert in the nu metin hous on Kristmas nite. Heuse every body and every body else were nere dyin of expectashun til the nite kum, whitch it did along with a rite nise kolectshun of rane, but i waz on the ground erly, notwithstandin the unkliemensy of the rane. It wur perfeckly bewilderin to see the slays and sleds kum a tarin thru the slush and dashin up to the metin hous, and stick a crowdin fur the ticket window. Thare were peeple frum every plase—frum Bulow and Belsano, and Ourmach, and sum frum Kambery furnis. I maid my wa after gittin my ticket forud to the frunt of the stage, as kluss to the moosick as i cud. The professer were a tupin up his fiddle, and his 'oman wur a pumpin some stranes out of a nise little table whitch she run with her fut. I war kind ov bewildered, but soon komensed to take noates. Sitch an ara of buty and moosicle talent wur never seen on sitch an okashun. Fust on the list I notised Squire Peasley's family. Thar war young Peasley, as led the base singing. He ar an uncomin nise yung feller, and can sing like any thing, or most better than some things. Then there wur the young Misses Peasley, all drest in white and lookin like little snow banks baskin in the munelite; so sweet and enticin did tha look. Then there war the Podgerses, who are all unknown moosicle, and sing in a most edifyin style. Then there wur Bruther Dogberry, who wur lookin as sanctimonious as if he held both bowers and the aice in the game he wur a playin, and he held onter his look like a kuntry postmaster to his offis—with both hands. He had his har komed up for the okashun, and wur a grate adishun to the performence. I kant enumerate all who were on the stage, but will jist menshun Bruther Griggins and Bruther Scroggins as takin a hevy part in the proceedins. Deakin Ripley opened up with a most techin supplication for lungs, and &c., &c., and so on, for to bring the konsert to a proper pitch. Then the singin and the fiddlin kommenst. I would remark here that as a fidlist the professer are good. The moosick roaled down the ile like whiskey down old Gruber's throte, and the konsert were in full blast. Just at this junkture a feller on my left seemed to be konsiderable knowulsed, as he kept a workin hisself around in a most amoosin and animated style. He drew from his kluse an instrument whitch i konkluded wur an opery glass, He brot it to bare, but i thot he war takin a rather exalted look at the galls in white, as he kept elevatin it more and more, and jist then I seen, insted ov hevin it to his observin organ, it were lokated rather lower down, and I found he war bathin his moosick-broosed sole in a flud of spiritual consolashun, which he war drawin frum a pop-bottle whitch he had thotfully prepared hisself with. Sum ov the nabers are down on hevin stimulatin beveridge at a metin hous, but i think there ar nothin that softens the soal and makes it take the moosick so free, and it is so appropriet for one to have spirtuel consolashun (this is a goak) when one goes to any getherin in a metin hous. I want is understud that i am in faver of beveridges on all sitch okashuns, whare it is nesessary fur the feelins to be elevated, and am open fur debate on the subjeck. But to resoom. The fidlin and singin wur still progressin, when there wur gineral attenshun called to some side purformense on the trajeck style. A hevy man with whiskers, and a lite man with a mustash, wur the acters in this trajeck sene. Lite man made a tack on hevy man's berde, when hevy man struck a horse-tail atertude. Lite man kum some P. R. muves, when hevy man let go his rite, and lite man lost his equalabraham and brot up in a very ungraseful position on the karpet, in the ile ov the metin hous. They then withdrew to slow fidlin, and the professeress akumpanied the performance with solem moosic in slo time. I notised several ov the audiense at this junkture drownin thare overstrung nerves in beveridge uv a suspicius kuller.

The fiddlin, after this, bekum more azermated, and the singin hart-rendin, and the house wur chuck full of melody. The femailes drest in white did so magnifercently sing that an old 'oman on my rite wur so tikled she droped her spectakles and exklamed, in the mutchness of goy: "La. sakes, how kan the dere critters sing so nise when the ground ar froze so hard that tha kant get enny wurms." I wur mutch disgusted at her remark, but she explaned that she thot they wur like birds, and sung better when they cud git wurms. I spostulated with hur on the unapproprietness of the remark. The fidlin here bekame very slow, and the organ ground slower yit, which caused me to take observashuns around a little, when i beheld the "Kommitty on ways and menes" removin a body down the ile—sade body seemin to be very mutch konvulsed, and his stumick severely muved by the stranes of sweet moosick of which he had absorbed an over-dose thru the agensy of bevaridges, which he indulged in over mutchly. As the prosesshin muved down the ile the moosick bekame more slower and slower, and it wur the most impressiv sene to see them movin along to slow fidlin. Tha lade the body in the rode, where he wur de-

The konsert soon after this konkluded, when we awl tuk our departer for our respectable homes. The Kommitty on Konduck hev been informed of sum very unkristian and buffalonious doins after the metin broke up, in whitch old unkle Jock kame nere losin his gobler and log chane. I think sum men hev very little feelin to ack in that way, after witnessin such a solem sene as thay had witnesed that nite. I must also sensure the konduck of some who took supper at the Doolittle hous in Fare-vu, in growlin at the price of the fare. I think thay had very poor brotin up, or else hev never stoped in large towns mutch. Now, dere Fremane, we no doubt will hev another konsert, and if we do, dew kum down and bring Misses Fremane along. I will secure you a sete kluss up to the fiddle. We are going to hev a Kommitty on beveridges, so thay will be more seleck, and will be more uniform than thay were this time in pint ov smell. If you have any old exkurshun tickets, bring 'em along, as thay say tha took 'em at there face.

I will now konklude, and perhaps you will here frum me agin during the kuming perlitikle kampane. Yures, till deth,

A. LEMING.

JOHNSTOWN, JAN. 6, 1868.

Dear Freeman—A terrible tragedy was enacted a few miles below this place, on Tuesday evening last, resulting in the almost instant death of Mr. Charles Parker, conductor of the Johnstown Accommodation. The details of the affair as I have learned them are that a young man named Hull got on the train at New Florence to come to this place, and shortly after the train left the station he got into a dispute with one of the brakemen in regard to the money he had paid to the conductor—Hall alleging that he had given a $2 bill and should have more change, while the brakeman insisted that it was a $1 note. The conductor, hearing the dispute, came up, and finding that he could not settle it, stopped the train and ejected Hull, but just as he was getting on the platform of the car Hull drew a pocket knife, and making several lunges at Parker, he at length drove the blade into his abdomen, penetrating clear to the back bone. The conductor staggered into the car, pulled the bell rope for starting, and within ten minutes thereafter was a corpse. When his train reached this point a most heart-rending scene was witnessed. The wife of the murdered man, to whom he was but six months wedded, had come from their home at Conemaugh station during the day, and had gone to the depot here in the evening for the purpose of returning home with her husband, and it was only when she was getting on the cars that the first intimation reached her that he had been murdered. No one will fail to conceive without me attempting to describe the heart-crushing effect of that terrible intelligence on the young and loving wife. The remains of the unfortunate man were taken to Conemaugh, and on Thursday were brought back and interred in Sandy Vale Cemetery here, followed by a large concourse of the Masonic fraternity and several hundreds of our citizens. The murderer was captured at Centreville, on Wednesday evening, and after a hearing was committed to the Greensburg jail to answer for the awful crime of murder.

Several daring burglaries have occurred here during the past few nights, and a general feeling of insecurity prevails among our down town citizens. The residence of Mr. Thos. Collins was entered on Friday night last, and the burglars deliberately ransacked a great portion of the house. The beautiful silver service, drawn that evening by Miss Lizzie Collins, was very neatly packed with a quantity of dress goods, etc., and quite a large bundle was thus prepared to remove surreptitiously, but at this stage of affairs Mr. Collins awoke, and his attention being attracted by the noise made by the burglars, he arose, and the night prowlers hearing him, and knowing no doubt that he was a man of determined purpose, they incontinently fled, taking nothing in their hasty flight but a circular belonging to one of Mr. C.'s daughters. On the same night the dwelling of Mr. A. J. Hawes was entered and a valuable gold watch and $65 in money taken therefrom. The premises of our popular druggist friend, C. T. Frazer, was visited the same night, but a young man who domicils at the house came home at the "wee sma' hour" when the burglars commenced operations, and fortunately frightened them away. Several other robberies occurred during the week, but as S. B. is pressed for time he cannot now particularize.

The two Fairs in operation here during the holidays proved complete successes, and between them at least $8,000 was realized. The most gratifying feature of the Fair business was the presentation of a valuable lithograph to the committee of the Catholic Fair by the managers of the Methodist, and a reciprocal gift from the latter to the former. A beautiful cigar case was voted for at the Catholic Fair, and Capt. Gageby happening to be here on a visit, the patrons of the enterprise had no difficulty in locating the most popular young man, and of course our military friend got the cigar case. Capt. Gageby, no doubt, feels highly elated at the result, as it was not so much the intrinsic value of the gift as the flattering expression of popular regard which was manifested in the result of the voting. I may remark per se that the genial face of our worthy friend will be visible here for a few days more, when he departs for his distant field of operations in Santa Fe, New Mexico, where his regiment is now stationed. May he ever meet with as many and as true friends as he has in his native village.

Ebensburg, Dec. 12, 1867-3m.

ALTOONA PROPERTY FOR SALE.—A House and Lot located on Claudia street, opposite the Catholic church, in the Borough of Altoona, is offered for sale on reasonable terms. The Lot is 60 by 125 feet, well improved and in good condition. The House is a two story frame building, contains seven commodious rooms, and is in excellent repair. For further information apply to SAMUEL HENRY, Ebensburg, Pa.

THE HARTFORD LIVE STOCK INSURANCE COMPANY.—We have now what we have long needed and asked for—a sound, reliable Live Stock Insurance Company, furnished with a plentitude of capital and other means and appliances,—a Board of Directors of excellent standing, and officers of acknowledged merit, sagacity, and serviceable experience.—N. Y. Insurance Monitor.

BIRTH.—On yesterday morning, Mrs. Williams, wife of Mr. Wm. J. Williams, of this plabe, of a son. All parties are doing "as well as could be expected." We con-

Literary Notices.

The World at Home.—We are in receipt of the first number of a new monthly magazine, bearing the above caption, just issued in Philadelphia by Messrs. Evans & Co. It is the best effort at magazine literature that has ever came under our observation, and upon its own intrinsic merits alone cannot fail to secure and maintain a leading position in the literary world. It is replete with the productions of some of the best American and European authors, is elaborately illustrated, and is issued upon a new and novel plan, whereby every subscriber obtains an opportunity each month to secure an article of merchandise, worth from $3 to $500, by the investment of only $3 for the magazine and 36 cents to prepay postage on the checks for goods awarded. Send 35 cents for a specimen of the magazine and one check, and learn all about this liberal enterprise. Extraordinary inducements to agents.

The Age.—We publish elsewhere the announcement of a great reduction in the subscription price of the weekly issue of the Philadelphia Age, and shall next week give place to the regular prospectus of this sterling Democratic journal. The Age is the leading Democratic organ of this State, and has ever been a firm, faithful and efficient advocate of the people's rights, and an unflinching opponent of Radical misrule and corruption. No Democrat who can afford the outlay should withhold his patronage from a paper so eminently deserving of general support and encouragement.

The Metropolitan Record, a mammoth weekly published in New York, is invaluable as a Democratic family journal. We know of no paper in the country which furnishes so large an amount of reading matter, nor any whose editorials and original contributions (of which it is almost entirely made up) are more forcible or exhaustive. The letters of "R E. Bel" are alone worth the subscription price, $5 per year.

Vick's Illustrated Catalogue and Floral Guide for 1868.—Mr. James Vick is a very extensive florist and gardener at Rochester, N. Y. He sends out his catalogue of flowers and plants, as large and as well illustrated as any magazine, containing a full description of all the flowers and plants to be found in his Nursery. Those who desire to make purchases for the coming season can rely on Mr. Vick as being an honorable dealer.

Democratic Watchman.—This able and energetic Democratic journal, published at Bellefonte, Pa., begins the New Year greatly enlarged and improved. It is now an eight page paper of the size of the N. Y. World, and bears evident marks of success. It is ultra democratic and very ably conducted

New York Teacher and American Educational Monthly—This is a journal of "Popular Instruction and Literature," comprising fifty pages of well arranged matter, of which J. W. Schern erhorn & Co., New York, are publishers. Its terms, $1.50 per year, seem reasonable from an inspection of the January number.

Wellsburg Times.—Our quondum friend of the Johnstown Democrat, before the advent of Capt. Woodruff, James F. Campbell, Esq., turns up again as publisher of the Wellsburg Times, in Western Virginia. We wish him abundant success.

Merry's Museum is an admirable monthly for boys and girls, and contains a choice variety of the most pleasing and entertaining reading matter and embellishments for the little folks. It is published by H. B. Fuller, Boston, at $1.50 per year.

MARRIED.

SHOEMAKER—McDONALD.—In this place, on Thursday, Dec. 26th, 1867, by Rev. R. C. Christy, Mr. A. J. Shoemaker and Miss Mary, second daughter of Joseph McDonald, Esq., all of Ebensburg.

J. S. STRAYER, JUSTICE OF THE PEACE, Johnstown, Pa. Office on the corner of Market street and Locust alley, [illegible]

1868. "THE WORLD" 1868.

At the opening of the year 1868, THE WORLD challenges, more confidently than ever, the sympathy and support of all patriotic citizens. A glorious work has been gloriously begun. Deep already answers to deep. The long fidelity of this journal to the cause of Liberty protected by Law stands nobly vindicated in a splendor of victory shining from Maine to California. Connecticut, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, have thundered forth their verdict upon the misrule and madness of the Past. But much more still remains to be done. Never was the peril of the country greater. The Radical party still decrees the death of representative self-government in ten sovereign States. Armed with military despotism and wholesale Negro Suffrage, it desperately grasps at a permanent lease of power, in defiance of public opinion, at the cost of enormous taxes and crippled industries, at the cost of Union and Peace.

To the great battle still to be fought THE WORLD will give all its efforts, all its energies. It asks of its friends in their turn as much; it asks of them more readers and a wider influence. It asks this with confidence in its claims as a newspaper and as an organ of opinion.

ALL THE NEWS.

For this the facilities of THE WORLD are unsurpassed by any journal in the United States. It seeks to excel by an accuracy and candor, a spirit and freshness in its news columns which shall commend it to readers of whatever party, sex, creed or place.

As an organ of opinion, THE WORLD is the unflinching champion of whereof the corner-stone is Freedom restrained by Justice; Freedom pure and simple, in the largest collective measure; the office of Justice being to protect Freedom from encroachments; Freedom of the individual citizen, in his rights of thought, speech, religion and locomotion; in his Right to choose his own food and drink, in spite of meddlesome temperance laws; in his Right to make any money bargains he thinks proper, in spite of foolish usury laws; in his Right to buy and sell in all markets, domestic and foreign, in spite of unjust protective tariffs; in his Right to representation in the legislative bodies which tax him, in spite of unconstitutional exclusions; Freedom of collective citizens to assemble for discussion of grievances; Freedom of all local communities to manage their local affairs without central interference; Freedom, in every section of the country, from the arrogant and unconstitutional domination of other sections. This large and comprehensive idea of Freedom sums up the politics of "THE WORLD," which will never be found wanting to this capital interest of the country and of the human race.

A paper published in the metropolis is naturally looked to for careful Market Reports and authentic information, and intelligent discussions relating to Trade, Commerce and Finance.

EDITIONS.

The WEEKLY WORLD, a large quarto sheet, same size as Daily, is now printed wholly in large type, and (since its union with the New York Argus) has the largest circulation of any weekly journal published save one. It is an unrivalled journal for the Farmer, Live Stock or Produce Dealer, Country Merchant, etc. Published Wednesday.

The SEMI WEEKLY WORLD is a large quarto sheet, same size as Daily, which, by omitting the great mass of city advertisements from the Daily, contains everything else that appears in the Daily and Weekly editions. Published Tuesday and Friday.

The DAILY WORLD affords a complete compendium and discussion of the news of every day.

Every Day Philosophy.

Hans Patrick C. Connor, formerly known by the nom de plume of "Beau Hacket," contributed the following to the St. Louis Home Journal:

Never insure your life for the benefit of your wife for a greater sum than ten thousand dollars. A widow with more money than that is a dangerous legacy to leave posterity.

The "game of life" is very like a game of cards. Time deals, death cuts, and everybody is waiting for the last trump.

I think men drink in crowds because they are afraid to drink by themselves. It requires a good deal of courage to stand up alone and pour a glass of whiskey down your throat.

There are some inconsistencies in this world that I don't exactly understand. Everybody is anxious to go to heaven, but nobody is in a hurry about it.

If a man is without enemies I would not give ten cents for all his friends.—The man who can please everybody hasn't got sense enough to displease anybody.

When an acquaintance says, "How are you?" and rushes by you without pausing for a reply, I wouldn't, if I was in your place, follow him more than a mile to tell him I was well.

A convenient way of testing the affections of your intended, is to marry another woman. If she don't love you, you will find it out immediately.

Do unto other men as they would like to do unto you, and you won't have enough money in two weeks to hire a shirt washed.

The song "Dear Mother, I've Come Home to Die," always struck me as a happy illustration of American assurance. Our young go abroad to spend the hard earnings of the old folks, and when they are dead-broke, return home to be buried at the expense of their impoverished parents.

A Remarkable Invention.—It is stated that a German glass-maker has lately made a remarkable discovery. He has invented a telecope, or magnifying glass, by means of which the most intricate nerves and vessels inside of the body may be seen from the outside. In fact, the whole arrangement and action of the interior organs may, by means of this glass, be distinguished.

The discovery will probably be of immense benefit to mankind, as by means of it the physician will be able to determine with unvarying accuracy, the nature of any particular disease, and the proper manner for treating the same.

The name of the inventor, who will probably realize a large fortune from his discovery, is Gotlieb Juntz. He is very poor, but a well read and highly intelligent man. He has an aged mother, an invalid wife, six children, and a blind sister, all dependent upon him for support. His mother was well acquainted with the poet Goethe, and it was probably her many anecdotes of this illustrious person which first inspired her son with a desire to do something to win the respect and esteem [illegible]

The glass he has made will probably place him among the first rank of inventors, and win him the esteem of whole nations.

By means of this invention he has already nearly cured his wife. Six months ago a well known doctor said she could not live, and pronounced her disease to be an affection of the heart.

Juntz, however, has now proven to him with the aid of the wonderful microscope that he was entirely mistaken; the stomach alone being the part affected.

We are eagerly looking for further information regarding Juntz and his wonderful glass.

HARTFORD LIVE STOCK INSURANCE COMPANY.

CASH CAPITAL $500,000.

We are now prepared to insure LIVE STOCK against both Death and Theft, in this live and reliable Company. Owners of stock have now the opportunity, by insuring with this Company, of obtaining security and remuneration for the loss of their animals in case of death or theft.

OWNERS OF HORSES,

Manufacturers, Farmers, Teamsters, Expressmen, Physicians, and in fact all who are to any extent dependant upon the services of their horses in their daily vocations, should insure in this Company, and thus derive a protection against the loss of their animals, which are in many cases the sole means of support to their owners.

FARM STOCK.

Farmers and others owning cattle should avail themselves of this means of saving the value of their stock, and secure an equivalent for the loss which would otherwise fall heavily upon them in being deprived of their Cattle, by insuring in this, the

PIONEER COMPANY OF AMERICA!

By insuring in this Company you exchange a certainty for an uncertainty. No man can tell whether his animals may not be stolen or die through some unforseen calamity.

MEDICAL PREPARATIONS.

$100 REWARD! For a medicine that will cure COUGHS, INFLUENZA, TICKLING IN THROAT, WHOOPING COUGH, or relieve CONSUMPTIVE COUGHS. AS QUICK AS

COE'S COUGH BALSAM

OVER ONE MILLION BOTTLES have been sold, and not a single instance of its failure is known. We have in our possession any quantity of Certificates, some of them from EMINENT PHYSICIANS who have used it in their practice, and given it the pre-eminence over all other compounds.

IT DOES NOT DRY UP A COUGH, but loosens it, so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely. Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat. A half bottle has often completely cured the most Stubborn Cough, and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to children of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure, if taken in season.

No Family should be without it. It is within the reach of all, it being the cheapest and best medicine extant.

COE'S DYSPEPSIA CURE!!

This great remedy for all DISEASES OF THE STOMACH is the discovery of the inventor of Coe's valuable Cough Balsam, while experimenting for his own health. It cured Cramp in the Stomach for him which had before yielded to nothing but choloform.

The almost daily testimony from various parts of the country encourage us to believe there is no disease caused by a disordered stomach it will not speedily cure. Physicians endorse and use it. Ministers give testimony of its efficacy; and from all directions we receive tidings of cures performed.

Dyspepsia it is sure to cure. Heartburn one dose will cure. Sick Headache it has cured in hundreds of cases. Headache and Dizziness it stops in thirty minutes. Acidity of the Stomach it corrects at once. Rising of the Food it stops immediately. Distress after Eating one dose will remove. Cholera Morbus rapidly yields to a few doses. Bad Breath will be changed with half a bottle.

IT IS PERFECTLY HARMLESS!

Its unprecedented success is owing to the fact that it cures by assisting Nature to reassert her sway in the system.

Nearly every dealer in the United States sells it at ONE DOLLAR PER BOTTLE.

C. G. CLARK & CO., Proprietors, March 14.-eowly. New Haven, Conn.
